ATHENS, OHIO, JUNE, 1917

No. 2

FOREWORD.

On June 23 we shall have a goodly number of graduates to be added to our alumni roll. We rejoice that these young people have arrived at their commencement and shall have reached the period of life in which they can show more loyalty to Ohio University than ever before. We know that due appreciation of their educational advantages at O. U. which they have enjoyed during the last four years, will increase constantly. We wish to emphasize the fact that their influence for their Alma Mater is just beginning. We hope that each graduate will be so successful in his business or profession that he may be a living advertisement of the institution in which he was prepared to enter upon the duties of life.

Let each graduate take advantage of every opportunity to direct desirable students to Ohio University. In these times of increased agitation for preparedness, what more patriotic deeds could be accomplished by all who do not take up arms, or labor in some other field of military service, than to assist in developing future intellectual, physical, moral, and spiritual leaders? In the future, more than ever before the world will have need of wise, efficient, and powerful leadership. "The law of war is the survival of the fittest." Then it is evident that development of the fittest survivors must follow after the war if we are to increase efficient citizenship.

No institution is better suited to develop efficient citizens than Ohio University. Let all the alumni of 1917 tell their friends this truth wherever they may go. Tell them about the moral advantages of O. U. because Athens is removed from the temptations of the larger cities. Spread the news of the instructive efficiency and high ideals of the teachers. Emphasize the administrative ability in the management of the institution, the altruism and public spirit of the people and student body in general.

We have attempted to write a word of introduction about every graduate of a four-year course. We have taken the names as they are found in the Athena. If there are any seniors whose names are not in the annual we are sorry that we have missed them. We regret that we have not space to recognize all other graduates for we realize that many of the most loyal supporters of Ohio University are found among the graduates of the shorter courses. We are grateful to all the seniors for their assistance in taking time and trouble to answer our inquiry. We wish to invite them also to make a contribution of a dollar or more to the Alumni Fund. We must urge all our friends to be as liberal as possible, for this is the only means which we have of doing this kind of work for the university. Mr. C. G. O'Brien, the treasurer of the Alumni Association will receive the contributions. We wish, too, that all might realize the importance of notifying us at once of any change in address, and that we might always have the degree and year of graduation following the name. Help us in these matters and we will be grateful indeed.

RECENT ORGANIZATIONS

The following is a brief explanation of some of the later organizations in the student body:

Torch is an honorary Junior-Senior organization. It was founded to recognize accomplishments and honors of versatile men at Ohio. It is generally conceded that a man must be more than an average student to gain admission. Professor Mackinnon is the faculty member and adviser.

Tau Kappa Alpha is a chapter of the national honorary debating and oratorical fraternity. This chapter was installed June, 1916.

Cresset is an honorary organization for girls. It was established at O. U. in 1913. The number is limited to fourteen. Each spring, members are elected with great care, to fill vacancies made by outgoing seniors. Eligibility is based upon scholarship and college activities.

The Senate, a literary organization for men was organized in 1915. Members attempt to do more advanced work than the other literary societies and strict parliamentary rules govern the work. Freshmen are not admitted to active membership and only seniors can hold office.

Oyo, girl's literary honorary society was established in 1914 by members of the Cresset and a few others whom they invited. The organization includes all women students of the university who by superior work prove themselves eligible.

Alphi Phi Chi is an honorary literary society for men. It was organized in 1915. Its purpose is to give young men more training in literary work. It is supervised by Dr. H. R. Wilson.

Advisory Board of Woman's League was instituted in 1913 under Dean Irma E. Voigt's supervision. Its purpose is to foster a "big sister" attitude of the upper class girls to those of the lower classes.

Dean Richeson supervises the B. S. in Ed. Club. All seniors of the four-year normal course are members. It affords better advantages for students to practical discussions by prominent men. P. P. Claxton addressed the club last October.

Debate Council of Women was organized in 1915 by the Department of Public Speaking. Every woman in the university is eligible to membership. The purpose of the Council is to increase efficiency in debate and oratory.

The Newman Club was organized at O. U., March, 1916, to bring together the Catholic students of the school. This club tries to secure for its members the highest social and religious ideals.

THE CLASS OF 1917.

RECENTLY APPOINTED TRUSTEES OF OHIO UNIVERSITY

ARTHUR C. JOHNSON
Editor Dispatch
Columbus, Ohio

THOMAS J. DAVIS
Vice-President First National Bank
Cincinnati, Ohio

ARTHUR CHARLES JOHNSON

Arthur Charles Johnson, Sr., was born in Ira, Summit County, Ohio, on October 10, 1875. His aunt, Miss Kate Cranz, was the teacher in a nearby country school, and at the age of 4½ years he ran away to her school room and attended regularly from that time until he was ready for High School. In 1891 he was graduated from the Wadsworth High School, and in the Fall of that year he entered Ohio University at Athens. At this time his aunt Kate Cranz was Professor of German and French in this institution.

An orphan, and possessed of no private means, Mr. Johnson was compelled to earn his way thru college. This he did in divers and sundry ways, among them teaching, farming, as a stone mason assistant, and running a threshing machine.

In 1892-93, when just 17 years old, he taught a district school in Summit county. In September, 1893, he returned to Ohio University, but left with a severe attack of typhoid fever and after his recovery entered Buchtel College in Akron, from which institution he was graduated.

Mr. Johnson was a member of the class of 1898, but in that Spring he entered the Army, went to Cuba and served during the Spanish-American War as a Sergeant Major in the Eighth Ohio.

In 1900 he received his Bachelor's Degree from Buchtel.

After leaving the army Mr. Johnson went on the staff of the Akron Beacon Journal, eventually becoming the city editor. In 1901 he went to the Washington Post, where he did city and desk work for one year.

In 1902 he returned to Ohio to become City Editor of the Columbus Evening Dispatch, and since 1911 he has been Managing Editor of that paper.

Mr. Johnson was married on Dec. 31st, 1902, to Miss Grace Reah, of Athens. Miss Reah was a student of Ohio University and of Goucher College, Baltimore, being graduated from Goucher College as a Bachelor of Arts and receiving a degree of Master of Arts from Ohio University in 1900, after a year of postgraduate study and teaching in this latter college.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have two sons, Derrol Reah, born March 31, 1904, and Arthur Chas., Jr., born July 4th, 1905. They live at 725 Franklin Ave., in Columbus.

THOMAS J. DAVIS

Mr. T. J. Davis, who was confirmed by the last Legislature as a Trustee of the Ohio University at Athens, is a Virginian by birth, and a graduate of Bethany College, at Bethany, West Virginia.

Mr. Davis located in the banking business in the eastern part of Kentucky, and assisted in the organization of several banking institutions in that section, now the leading institutions of their localities. Mr. Davis came to Cincinnati as assistant cashier of the Fifth National Bank in 1892, was later made Cashier, and in 1901 became Cashier of the First National Bank, and later a Vice-President of the same institution. The First National Bank of Cincinnati is the largest banking institution in the State of Ohio in point of banking capital and surplus.

Mr. Davis is one of the most influential men in Cincinnati, and is considered high in banking circles all over the country. He is most thoroughly interested in his family and the better welfare of his friends. He stands very high in the esteem of all who know him. He has no bad habits, has no use for tobacco, and is an excellent type of Southern manhood. Because of his interest in the spiritual, intellectual and moral advancement of young people, his business efficiency should make him an excellent trustee and Ohio University is fortunate indeed in procuring his assistance.

MARGARET BOYD.

Margaret Boyd, generally known and spoken of thruout her life as Maggie Boyd, was born April 7, 1845; entered the Ohio University as a student April 1, 1868; graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, June 26, 1873; taught in the High School at Monroeville, Ohio, 1873-75; in the Cincinnati Wesleyan College for Women, 1875-79; in the High School at Martinsville, Indiana, 1880-1884; in the High School of Athens, Ohio, as Assistant Principal, her sister Kate being Principal, 1884-98; died October 10, 1905.

This brief epitome of her life, studies, and labors, is enough to give evidence of her fine intelligence, her high ambitions, and patient industry. But much more than this is demanded to make her record occupy the place it is entitled to in the annals of her Alma Mater.

Maggie was of pure Scotch-Irish descent. Her father's name was Daniel Boyd. He kept a careful family record, a copy of which I have at hand and some parts of which have an appropriate place in this memorial of his youngest daughter.

His paternal grandfather's name was Albert Boyd, of whose life no particulars are known. But a son of Albert, named Robert Boyd, married Jane Ramsay in Ireland, came perhaps in middle life to America, and died in Coshocton County, Ohio.

Of the eight children of Robert and Jane Ramsay, whose descendants are very numerous and are found in many parts of the United States, Daniel Boyd, Maggie's father, was the second. He was born in the parish of Killibegs, town of Ardara, County of Donegal, in North Ireland, Sept. 7, 1794. He came to America in 1819. In Holmes County, Ohio, he was married in 1825 to Jane Elliott.

He came to Carthage Township, Athens County, in 1839, where his children grew up and where he died Aug. 20, 1867. Soon after his death, his farm was sold, and his widow and children removed to the home on North Congress Street in Athens, known as the Boyd House. This was the home of the family for nearly half a century.

Here is the place to introduce Maggie's mother, Jane Elliott, and some account of the most excellent family to which she belonged.

The Elliotts, like the Boyds, were North Ireland people. It is my understanding that the progenitors of both families came into Ireland from Scotland. The Ireland home of the Elliotts was in County Londonderry.

Jane Elliott was the daughter of John and Fanny Blaine Elliott, the eleventh of their fifteen children. At the age of fifty, the father died in Ireland. Later the widow came to Holmes County, Ohio. Whether all of the children came to this country, I do not know. Part of them, at least did, and two of these were active and prominent in the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church in America. The Rev. Simon Elliott was at the time of his death Presiding Elder of the Wellsburg District in the Pittsburg Conference. Rev. Charles Elliott, D. D., was so prominent and influential that a somewhat extended account of him can not with propriety be omitted.

He was born in Ireland in 1792 and died in Iowa in 1869. He was educated at Dublin and came to America in 1814. "In 1822 he labored as superintendent of the Wyandotte Mission, Upper Sandusky, and for five years was Presiding Elder of the Ohio District. From 1827 to 1831 he was professor of languages in Madison College, Uniontown, Pa., and subsequently he edited the Pittsburg Conference Journal and the Western Christian Advocate. After 1848 he returned to his ministerial duties, but in 1852 was again appointed editor of the Advocate. He wrote A Treatise on Baptism (1834), History of the Great Secession from the M. E. Church (1855), Reminiscences of The Wyandotte Mission (1868), and a History of the M. E. Church in the South and West, 1844-1866 (1868)."

The foregoing quotation is from Funk & Wagnalls Standard Encyclopedia. It omits one important literary work of Dr. Elliott, a volume on Slavery. A copy of this work is in the Library of my oldest son, Charles Elliott Davis, having been presented to him by the late Rev. Mordecai D. Vaughn, who knew Dr. Elliott well. He was one of the ablest and most vigorous opponents of slavery in our country. He made the Western Christian Advocate one of the only two religious papers in the entire North that were distinctly and unflinchingly anti-slavery. The other was The Morning Star, denominational organ of the Freewill Baptists, then published at Dover, N. H. In 1875 I became acquainted with Rev. Thomas Harrison, D. D., formerly President of Moore's Hill College, Ind., assistant editor of the Advocate while Dr. Elliott was Editor-in-Chief. Dr. Harrison told me that once a week when he brought the religious exchanges into the office of the Advocate, Dr. Elliott would say, "Brother Harrison, hand me The Morning Star. Let me comfort and strengthen my heart by reading the only religious paper that has the principle and the courage to stand by us in this terrible conflict."

Dr. Elliott was very active in the work of the M. E. Church in Ohio. He helped locate and establish the O. W. U. at Delaware. The proud love of the Boyd children for this uncle was one of the formative influences in Maggie's young life.

Six of the nine Boyd children were born in Coshocton County. Fletcher, Fannie, and Maggie were born after the removal to the farm home in Athens County. The oldest son was a half-grown boy at the time of this removal; the youngest daughter was a grown woman at the time of the removal from the farm to the town of Athens.

What fruitful years were the twenty-eight from 1839 to 1867, for the sons and daughters of this family. The common schools and the neighboring academy at Coolville gave to them a solid education and all of them but Maggie became teachers upon the basis of this education. The oldest son became a graduate of Starling Medical College, and the other two sons graduates of Ohio University.

The oldest son, Dr. John Elliott Boyd, married Miss Caroline Carr of Wilkesville, Ohio, practiced medicine two years, first at Hockingport, Ohio, and later at West Columbia, Va. He died of typhoid fever in May, 1855. His only child, Jane Elliott Boyd, commonly called Ella Boyd, was the second woman to become a student and a graduate of O. U. On the day of her graduation, June 22, 1876, she was married to John M. Davis, class of '73. She has one daughter and three sons, all graduates of Rio Grande College, four grand-daughters and two grandsons. The daughter, Carrie S. Davis, died October 18, 1915.

Mary Ann Boyd, the second child, died in 1867, a few days after the death of her father. She was 39 years old at the time of her death. She taught many terms in Coshoc-ton County and aided her brother John in gaining his medical education.

Jane Boyd was born in 1831, taught many years, during her later years was at the head of the Boyd House in Athens, where she died in 1885. A lady who, as a student of the Ohio University, knew her well in those days, has thus written regarding her: "When I first came to Athens, the gentle mother was slowly fading out of life, and Miss Jane Boyd was the housekeeper. It was the delight of the College girls to spend part of Saturday afternoons at Boyds', and I am sure the influence of that happy home life and the earnest friendly counsel has had much to do with the success of other homes. I am glad to pay my own grateful tribute to what it meant to me, a young college girl, away from home and friends. Miss Jane was always so interested in young people's efforts, so sympathetic, so helpful, so inspiring, that the students who shared her home owe much to her influence. She gave herself freely, devotedly to her home and family, but the fullness of her nature overflowed generously to all the helpful activities of the town. Many a poor family were blest by a call from Miss Jane and her well filled basket."

"She was a member of the noble band of women in Athens, called the Crusaders. The present saloonless condition of Athens is due to many causes, and the faithful persistent efforts of many people; but the hall was started rolling by a little band of quiet, home-loving women back in 1873 on their knees in the saloon."

"Catherine, or as we all knew her, Kate Boyd, was born at Keene, Coshoc-ton County, Ohio, May 22, 1833, and died at the home of her nephew, Perley Boyd Lawrence in Athens, Ohio, March 6, 1913. Her education was received in the public schools and in the Coolville Seminary, which she and her sisters attended. On this foundation she built a broad and liberal scholarship by means of extended reading, travel, and observation. She taught when quite young and there is a record of her having been granted a two years' certificate (the highest then granted to anybody) when she was but nineteen. In 1871 Judge Calvary Morris appointed her as member of the Board of School Examiners with Major J. M. Goodspeed, and Mr. J. P. Weethoe. Such a thing as a woman on the Board was unknown anywhere in the State at that time and at the expiration of her two years' term the question of the legality of a woman's so serving arose and she refused reappointment, although her service had been most acceptable. She taught at Mansfield and various places, but it was in 1876 when she was elected Principal of the Athens High School that her real life work began.

"For twenty-three years she trained the minds and moulded the characters of Athens' young people as they came under her care, and her strong personality impressed itself upon Athens life in this manner.

"Ah, there was many a lesson more important and more lasting than Geometry or Latin taught up there in the old High School Building in those years when 'the Boyd Girls' were the Faculty." (E. W.)

In addition to the foregoing statements, it is to be noted that Kate had formerly taught four years in the Athens High School and one year in the Portsmouth High School, and one year in Mansfield, before becoming Principal at Athens.

The fifth child in this family was Rev. Hugh Boyd, D. D., a graduate of Ohio University, class of 1859, for many years an active minister, and then for more than a third of a century Professor of Latin in Cornell College, Mount Vernon, Iowa. He was at one time offered the Presidency of Ohio University, but declined. Several years ago he received a Carnegie retiring allowance, ceased teaching, and spent a quiet and honored old age in his Iowa home, where he died March 6, 1917. He was born Aug. 6, 1835.

His first wife was Ida Patterson, of Amesville, Ohio. There were two children of this marriage, Luella and Robert Allen. His second wife was Mary Moody, daughter of Granville Moody, a distinguished officer in the Union Army, an eloquent and widely known preacher in the M. E. Church. The children by this marriage were a son, Granville, now deceased, Mrs. Clifford Burr, and Miss Lucy Boyd.

Lucy A. Boyd was born in Coshoc-ton County in 1837, and died at the Athens home Dec. 30, 1911. She thoroughly prepared herself for teaching and for many years did splendid work in that profession. She taught for a time in the High School of Jackson, Ohio, her superintendent being Moses James Morgan, a classmate of Maggie in the class of 1873. Then by recommendation of Gen. C. H. Grosvenor, she was employed as teacher in the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home at Xenia, Ohio. Her work here was highly satisfactory. With her fine and finely poised intellect was joined a warm and sympathetic heart. Her service to her pupils brought into their lives a choice and rich influence. The increasing feebleness of her sister Jane called her back to Athens, and the stricken home, and in that sacred service she spent the remaining years of her life.

"The Boyd courage was tested in Miss Lucy in quite another way. Do any of you think it takes less courage to resign than to attack? How she would have loved a broader life, we can only guess, how well she was fitted for it, we know. But her loved ones needed her and to them she gave cheerfully the offering of her life, 'seeking not her own.' She was a most valued member of the Pallas Club for many years. The high quality of her literary work, her faithfulness and conscientiousness, and generous appreciation endeared her greatly to its members, and the Pallas Club feels itself to have been blessed by her presence, by her influence, and inspired to greater usefulness by her ideals.

"Suddenly, without warning, the call came, and on December 30, 1911, Miss Lucy's passing left Miss Kate the last of her sisters." (E. W.)

I have already written regarding William Fletcher Boyd and what I have written has been printed in one of the publications of Ohio University. Years ago some one said of him, "He was incapable of a thought not consistent with abstract righteousness, or of conduct not consistent with the Golden Rule." His professional work as a lawyer was extended and successful. He had for some years a position in the city government of Cincinnati in which his energy and his high standards of duty gave him great influence, and brought him high credit. His official work connected with the educational and publication interests of his denomination engrossed much of his time and energy for years. In this he was highly useful and highly prized. During his last years he was a trustee of his Alma Mater.

Fanny Blain Boyd was born in the farm in Carthage Township in 1842, was married to Charles Wyman Lawrence in 1865, and died in Athens in 1899. She also taught for one term in her early womanhood. She had in the highest degree all the intellectual and spiritual traits of the family. Her sympathy with the distressed and needy and her quiet and liberal helpfulness made her a blessing to many. Her husband after some years of life on the farm removed to Athens and established himself in business. They took a deep interest in the education of their two sons at the old O. U. The oldest son graduated in 1892. The youngest was a successful student for years, but did not complete the course. Both reside in Athens. Wesley Boyd Lawrence, born in 1869, was married to Belle Rose in 1897. Perley Boyd Lawrence, born in 1871, was married in 1893 to Abbie Vernon Whipple. Their daughter Grace was born in 1899.

The loving faithfulness of the Lawrence men to the needs and interests of the Boyd sisters can never be fully known. Charles W. was their brother and Wesley and Perley were their sons. In those last years of failing strength and growing pain and infirmity, not a day passed without their oversight and service. With the constant co-operation of Fletcher as long as his health permitted, chiefly by the business activity of Wesley after the breakdown of Fletcher's health, all the business of the sisters was cared for, their affairs kept in perfect order, and every want anticipated and provided for. When Kate was left alone, a cousin, Mrs. Angie McCaskey, of Coshocton County, cared for her, at first in the Boyd House, later in the home of Perley Lawrence. In that home, the last of the sisters "fell on sleep."

So much of Maggie's life history has been incidentally brought out in the history of her family, that I shall go at once to her life as a student and a graduate of Ohio University.

She became a student at the opening of the Spring term, April 1, 1868.

The faculty at that time consisted of the President, Rev. Solomon Howard, D. D., and Professors Eli T. Tappan, William Henry Young, Alexander S. Gibbons, and William Harvey Glenn Adney.

I do not think that any member of the faculty had any objection to the presence of a lady as a member of the student body. There was, however, some fear that the public might be unfavorably influenced by that fact. For this reason her name appeared as M. Boyd in the catalog for 1869-69. Thereafter it was printed in full, for the faculty soon learned that there was a general approval of her presence.

Of the members of the class of 1873, to which she belonged at graduation and which contained seven members, two, Moses James Morgan, of Oak and John Merrill Davis, of Harrisonville, entered college with Maggie. Two members, Frank Otis Ballard of Athens and Ripley Hoffman Kinnison of Dawkin's Mills, had been students before. The other two members, Evan Jerome Jones of Thurman and Charles Herbert Dixon, of Athens, entered later.

During the first term of our attendance, Maggie, Morgan and I, were the members of a large class in Latin that recited twice daily. Our teacher, Professor Adney, always rose at Maggie's entrance, greeted her by name, and gave her a chair. Her air and bearing were modest and dignified, almost painfully marked for a few weeks by timidity. But the timidity steadily wore off. She had good lessons, recited in a clear distinct voice, and at once secured the respect and admiration of that class. It was the same in other classes and in the Philomathean Literary Society, to which her brothers belonged and which gallantly opened its doors to receive her. Her place in the appreciation and love of the College world steadily grew larger to the end of her course. On the week of her graduation, she and the other members of the class of '73 who were Philomatheans, received their society diplomas from the hands of Hugh Morrison Lash of the class of '70. He was a brilliant and forceful speaker, and the hall rang with cheers at his closing words: "For the first time in the history of the Ohio University, a lady receives a diploma, and that a Philo diploma."

For two years hers was the only lady's name in the college catalog. In the catalog of '69 and '70, there appear in addition the names of Mary Virginia Gibbons, daughter of Prof. Gibbons, and Pella Almira Creighton, daughter of the Rev. Joseph Creighton. Next year Maggie and Miss Gibbons were alone. But in the catalog of '71 and '72, in addition to Maggie were Mary Virginia Gibbons, Mary Kate Hoyt, Sarah Tucker, Ella Boyd, Julia Harris, Eva Arnold, Ella Clarissa Radford, Emma Jane Radford, and H. Mary Wilson. In the year of Maggie's graduation, the other lady students were Ella Boyd, Hester Ellen Boyd, Mary Ames de Steiguer, Hattie S. Guthrie, Sarah Jane Michael, and the two Radford sisters.

A tribute to her spirit and work as a student, so discriminating and true, has been paid by a lady who knew her well, that I enrich this article by quoting the following sentences:

"Margaret it was, as you all know, who opened the doors of Ohio University for women students—but what a feat it was, in what a brave womanly way it was done, none of us can quite realize. Agitation there had been, plenty of it; fulmination; angry demand; noisy argument—all in vain.

"But this gentle woman, believing that she had as good a right to a higher education at the hands of the State as had her brothers, believed moreover that if she claimed her right she would not be refused—so one day she quietly requested that she might be allowed to attend the recitations and share the privileges of the classes. Leave was granted to make the experiment, and day after day 'M. Boyd,' as she appeared in the catalog, went her lonely way, the only woman in a college full of men. What courage it took you may guess. Those of you who know what a sensitive flower of woman she was, can but marvel, as I always did, at the brave spirit that dared even while it suffered. For herself alone, ardently as she desired knowledge, she could never have so defied precedent, but for the sake of the women to come after and all it would mean to them, she kept on her way, serene, dignified, victorious through sheer force of character, and we who come after her can never pay her honor enough.

"A less perfectly poised woman could never have carried it through to success, for pitfalls there were many. But Margaret Boyd's selfless dignity supported her courage, and the door her gentle spirit opened will never again be closed." (E. W.)

In the preparation of this history of Maggie Boyd and this tribute of her worth, in addition to my own personal knowledge and recollection, I have had invaluable assistance from several other sources. One of the most helpful and most highly prized of these was a paper prepared and read in the M. E. Church at Athens at the funeral of Kate Boyd by Edith Woodruff, class of '88, now Mrs. Edwin D. Sayre of Athens. The selections from her paper are placed within quotation marks and followed by the initials E. W.

Rev. David H. Moore, D. D., retired Bishop of the M. E. Church, wrote me as follows in January, 1915:

"Upon assuming the presidency of the Cincinnati Wesleyan College for Women in 1875, in nominating my faculties, I presented Miss Boyd as head of the Preparatory Department. She was confirmed and wrought with eminent satisfaction during the school years, 1875-6, 1876-7, 1877-8, when she was promoted to the College Faculty as Professor of Mathematics. In the latter capacity she served most satisfactorily through the year '78-9; when, owing, I think, to ill health, she declined re-election.

"She was conscientious, capable, ambitious, untiring; a model teacher as she was a model woman."

The authorities of her Alma Mater have given her a most appropriate monument upon the College Campus. This is Boyd Hall, which will accommodate eighty-five girls. It was erected in 1907 at a cost of $40,000. The reading on a tablet near the entrance is as follows:

"Boyd Hall, named in Honor of Margaret Boyd, of the Class of 1873. The First Woman Graduate of O. U."

She was worthy of the admiring and trustful affection lavished upon her in life, and of all the subsequent honor that has been and shall be hers. Her last pastor, the Rev. W. L. Slutz, D. D., has written the following fitting and well weighed words concerning her:

"Her beautiful, unselfish life was a benediction to all who were in any way associated with her. Prudent, tireless, competent, well-poised, and ever vigilant, and, withal, most kind and gentle, were the adornments of her priceless life." * * * "The last few years were years of comparative feebleness, but the rising cloud of the uncertainty of life did not for a moment disturb the quiet peace of her soul. Well she knew that the sorrow of separation should be succeeded by the joy of greeting friends, on the other side. She has heard His words, 'They shall walk with Me in white, for they are worthy.' In the spotless purity of this life she now beholds the King in His Beauty."

May this tribute help to project and perpetuate the sacred lessons of her gracious and resplendent life.

FEW CHANGES IN FACULTY BY THE TRUSTEE BOARD.

The Ohio University trustees met Tuesday morning and in an hour cleaned up the business before them. The biggest item of the session was the employing of the faculty and all persons on the pay roll of the institution. There were few resignations, and the trustees were generous in increasing salaries nearly all the way down the long list.

Dean Chubb was given a leave of absence for the summer, and the following honorary degrees were awarded:

Master of Arts—Dr. Carl DeCasto Hoy, Columbus; Dr. Albert F. Linscott, Marion; Judge Roscoe D. Mauck Gallipolis.

LL. D.—Hon. Elam Fisher, Eaton.

B. Ped.—John H. Beveridge, superintendent of schools, Omaha, Neb.; Fred Kirkendall, superintendent of schools, Zanesville; Daniel C. Tabler, high school principal, Parkersburg.

The resignations accepted were Prof. Moler, Miss Beadle, Miss Cunningham, Violet Patterson and Julia Baker. Leaves of absence were granted to Allen Carter, Miss Brison, C. O. Williamson and Edna Secrest.

Prof. W. E. McVay is to head the new John Hancock High School at $2,000, and he will be assisted by Ingraham Stewart, of Williamstown, W. Va. Coach Banks was employed again at $1900. Miss Mary Connett of Athens, was employed to teach in the new high school at $900. Frank V. Whitehouse, now at Columbia University, will teach Spanish at $1600. Maude Cryder, of Athens, will teach German in the place of Prof. Carter, and Olive Robens art in the place of Miss Brison. Mrs. Annie Morrison, of Athens, was made matron of the new dormitory, Lindley Hall. A large number of students were employed as part time assistants. William R. Cable and his wife will hereafter have charge of the registrar's office at a combined salary of $2200, and Prof. Dunkle who has been registrar for so many years will hereafter be Professor of Greek. General increases of $100 were granted all heads of departments, while many other salaries were increased.

It is probable that there will be several other vacancies in the faculty when college begins next fall. Profs. Mackinnon, Jefferson and Skinner have applied for the second officers' training camp, and Dr. Douthitt will probably be in an army medical training camp by that time, having made application.—Daily Messenger.
